

MARCONI EXPLAINS WIRELESS WAVES.

Tells Why Messages Cannot Be Intercepted in Transmission.

Since Marconi's return on the Philadelphia the question of mingling of waves or a confusion of messages has become much simplified. Prof. W. S. Franklin had charged that a commercial Marconi system would create a state of affairs analogous to the confused din of a Stock Exchange. How his recent trip gave the lie to this and similar criticism Marconi shows in the following interview:

"How about conflict of waves?" Mr. Marconi was asked. "Some of your critics say you cannot have several instruments working in the same field."

"If they are properly tuned to different frequencies," he said, "two instruments can work side by side without interference."

"And that applies to both senders and receivers?"

"It does."

"Then there is no confusion to be feared?"

"No, none whatever."

"Suppose there were an overlapping of one instrument's tune upon that of another?"

"Then there would be interference and confusion."

"But not otherwise?"

"No."

"And you can, with certainty, tune your instruments that there is no interference and no overlapping?"

"Yes."

"Is the service just as great as in a message sent by wire?"

"I do not wish to discuss any comparison with present methods. But this I say, as I said to the stockholders of the company, if anybody thinks he can pick up one of my messages with a receiver not in tune with it, let him try."

Hears Own Note Only.

The Marconi receiver is a very different kind of an ear from that supposed by Prof. Franklin. Instead of possessing less selective capacity, it is endowed with a more exclusive capacity of that kind. In fact, it hears only its own note. Just as one cannot hear sounds so shrill as to be audible only to an insect, so one Marconi receiver may be utterly responsive to electric waves that set another receiver, resting beside it, into instant sympathetic vibration.

A piano, in order to play a tune, must have at least a range of one octave, but a Marconi receiver does not need the equivalent of an octave in wave lengths or in frequencies of vibration. It can be tuned to a single frequency, corresponding with that emitted by its twin transmitter, and with that single note, so to speak, it can play its tune—i. e., transmit or record its message.

But it will not do to take the very next frequency of vibration in the series (which extends to millions) and tune a second pair of instruments upon that, because then there would be interference.

Experience has shown that a certain number of vibrations must intervene between those that are employed for two different sets of instruments in order to avoid interference. Just what that number is Mr. Marconi is not prepared to say, but he has no difficulty in finding plenty of vibrations sufficiently separated along the scale to give an indefinite number of frequencies available for different and independent sets of instruments.

Waves May Be Reflected.

Another interesting point concerns the possibility of directing the waves by means of reflectors, as a parabolic mirror directs a beam of light. This can be done, Mr. Marconi says, only over distances of a few miles.

COULDN'T BREAK IN ON A WIRELESS.

The arrival of the Umbria, of the Cunard line, at this port has interested the wireless telegraphic work of Sig. Marconi.

The Umbria was directly between the Philadelphia and the sending station at Poldhu, England, while messages were being flashed more than half way across the Atlantic. Though the wireless instruments on the Umbria were in good order and were open all the time, not one of the messages sent from Poldhu was intercepted.

The Umbria exchanged messages with the Campania and Etruria, which shows that the instruments were in perfect order. But they were not "attuned" with the sending instruments at Poldhu.

SOLOIST KNOWS HOW TO SING; "YOU DON'T!" CRIES ORGANIST.

Question as to Whether Hymn Should Be Drawled or Not Stirs Up Brooklyn Choir.

Organist Charles Anson Fuller, who resigned from Emmanuel Baptist Church, Brooklyn, because of a misunderstanding with Mrs. Blanche Armstrong Weinschenk, the soprano soloist, tells one story and Mrs. Weinschenk another, but both admit that the organist, told the soloist that a woman talking to Jesus would not drawl her words, and that the soloist replied that she knew how a woman would address the Saviour.

Mr. Fuller said to an Evening World reporter today: "Mrs. Weinschenk was the only one of the old choir retained when I took charge last May. Mrs. Weinschenk had been here for five years, and she wanted things her own way. The climax was reached a month ago when we commenced rehearsing for yesterday's song service. The oratorio 'The Woman of Samaria' was being rehearsed. Mrs. Weinschenk wanted to sing her solo part very slowly. I told her it should be fast, and added that no woman talking to Christ would drawl her words, but would make them sharp and full of life. She told me that she knew how a woman would address Christ."

"There was another rehearsal on Feb. 22 for a chorus service. I purposely told one story and Mrs. Weinschenk another, but both admit that the organist, told the soloist that a woman talking to Jesus would not drawl her words, and that the soloist replied that she knew how a woman would address the Saviour."

MRS. KEATING SENT TO A SANITARIUM. JAIL-BREAKERS KILLED SHERIFF.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF SHOP-LIFTING FOUND INSANE. OFFICIAL SHOT IN ATTEMPT AT RECAPTURE.

Said She Could Not Help Taking Things After Seeing "The Girl and the Judge."

Searched Under Charge of Murdering Woman Planned Wholesale Escape and Did Shooting.

On the certificate of Drs. Charles L. Dana and J. Arthur Booth that Mrs. Frederick L. C. Keating, of No. 222 Central Park West, was mentally deranged, Justice O'Gorman has committed her to the sanitarium at Central Valley.

Mrs. Keating was arrested for shop-lifting in a Sixth avenue department store. She said that after seeing the performance of "The Girl and the Judge" at the Lyceum Theatre she could not help taking things.

Louis Loewenstein, her counsel, secured her discharge before Magistrate Olmsted when she was not in court and the proceeding then considered mysterious, is explained by her commitment.

ACARA IN BAD WAY.

The British steamer Acara, which went ashore Saturday morning on Jones Inlet bay, Long Island, is in a bad position. Two of her plates on the starboard side, amidships, are badly twisted. Her engine room is full of water and there is considerable water in her hold.

March is the Month to put CHINA In Your Closet

LOOK OVER THE BEAUTIFUL WARES, displayed so lavishly this morning, and see if it is not just such China and Glass as you have been wishing for—the finest, choicest, newest goods that can be found anywhere. It's all new; the foreign goods came direct from the factories in France, Austria and England—made up for us, since our orders were placed last Fall. It has been landed during the last month; opened during the last week—new, fresh, perfect, beautiful; yet

A Third to a Half Under-Price

The variety on our floor at the present time is remarkable. There are, for instance, a hundred new styles, recent patterns in Dining Sets. In Fancy China the display is tuler and choicer than ever before, and prices are remarkably low.

The in-a-br-e makes a delightful exhibition, and prices are unmatchably low. The Cut Glass are of wonderful enthusiasm on Saturday, first of all, because of its brilliancy and beauty; then the prices made possible on easy. Here are the details of wares and prices:
